BULGARS REPORTED IN MONASTIR; BIG BATTLE AT GORIZIA

Servians' Plight Goes From Bad to Worse With Occupation of City in Southwestern Part of Country—Allies' Aid Too Late.

Austrians Admit Severe Losses Among Civilians by Bombardment of Gorizia, but Say Lines Hold.

Italians Report Capture of Trenches and Declare They Withstood Seven Attacks on Slopes.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The correspondent at Bern, Switzerland, of the Central News telegraphs:

"Diplomats understand that an Italian declaration of war on Germany is only a matter of hours."

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Although no official confirmation has been received of the report that the Bulgarians have captured Monastir, in Southwestern Servia, little hope is felt in England that the announcement is premature. Accepting it as true, the impression is growing that the entente allies arrived too late to give any service to the Servians.

The only thing certain in regard to the plight of Servia is that its military situation is going from bad to worse. In the north the Servians are giving way slowly before the battering Austrian-German forces, which probably would move more rapidly if weather conditions were better. Today announced the capture of 2800 more Servians. It is established that the Bulgarians are in Prilipan and at least have made Monastir untenable. The Anglo-French armies based on Saloniki seem to do no better than hold their positions.

It is thought possible that the Servians will make a stand on the historic plain of Kosovo, east of the Montenegro frontier, where more than 500 years ago they lost their independence to Turkey. They must either do this or retire into the mountains of Montenegro or northern Albania, where, although they would be nearer help from the Adriatic, it would be difficult to keep them supplied owing to the absence of roads.

Great Battle Before Gorizia.
Official statements from Rome and Vienna agree that a violent struggle for the possession of Salona, capital of the Austrian crownland, 22 miles northwest of Trieste, is in progress, but they contradict each other as to the results of furious attacks. The statement issued at Rome says:

"All along the front the artillery duel continues. Our guns dispersed enemy marching columns in the Astico zone and in the upper Cismon. It destroyed shelters, magazines, food supplies, barracks at Gorizia and also swept numerous enemy batteries posted on heights to the east of the city and others hidden in orchards and gardens near the city. Finally it shelled a column of troops which retreated hastily into Gorizia.

"On the Carso Plateau our infantry renewed its attacks yesterday with success, and especially in the Monte San Michele zone, where the Perugia brigade succeeded in conquering all the ground which slopes from the third summit of the mountain to the Isonzo between Petzano and Boschil. Afterward driven from that position by a violent counter attack it counted attacked in its turn and recaptured the lost trenches. Through the night the enemy renewed furious assaults, succeeding seven times in reaching our lines. He was mowed down seven times by the accurate fire of our artillery and rifles and was hurled back in disorder with enormous losses. Then, worn out but indomitable, the brave fusiliers of the 12th Regiment, their feet swathed in sand bags, burst into the enemy trenches in the darkness, completely dislodging the defenders and taking 115 prisoners besides abundant war material.

"The enemy aeroplanes yesterday threw bombs on Verona, where four citizens were wounded, and on Vicenza and Grado, where there were neither victims nor damage. Another enemy squadron threw 15 bombs on Udine, killing 15 persons and wounding 19 civilians and 21 soldiers. The material damage done was unimportant."

Severe Losses in Gorizia.
The official statement issued last night at Vienna contained the following regarding operations before Gorizia:

"The Italians have resumed their attacks on the Isonzo front. The attack Gorizia bridgehead, which is kept under an uninterrupted heavy gunfire. At one time directed chiefly against the attempts to attack Calavria and a strong attack against Polgora Height were repulsed."

"A systematic bombardment of the town of Gorizia lasted two hours. Three thousand shells of all calibers were used in this work of destruction. They caused serious fires. The military damage done was unimportant."

posts for the goal. Score: Harvard 13, Yale 0.

The ball was brought out and Way kicked off for Yale. The ball went to Bells on Harvard's 10-yard line. The crimson back ran it to Harvard's 42-yard line before he was thrown. Way made two yards around left end. Mahan kicked out of bounds on Harvard's 21-yard line. It was Yale's ball and the blue team started another wing shift play. Van Nostrand tried Harvard's right end and had a clear field when thrown by Mahan with a gain of only two yards. Bingham wiggled through for four yards and Taylor dropped back for a kick. The punt was short and stopped on Yale's 47-yard line where the ball went to Harvard. Bells dove into Black and gained four yards.

Every Harvard, Play Successful.

Harvard started the second period on Yale's 47-yard line and King made five yards through center. Mahan got five more, and on Yale's 15-yard line, King fumbled over the Yale line for four yards. Another fair forward pass netted King four yards. Nearly every Harvard play seemed good for at least four yards. Mahan made it a first down by taking the ball in to Yale's 23-yard line through Way. On an end run and a delayed pass Harte carried the ball to Yale's 15-yard line. The Harvard's plays were all deceptive. Way stopped Mahan's plunge after a gain of a yard. King could not gain through the same place. Gates went in for C. Sheldon. It was fourth down for Harvard. It was fourth down for Harvard with a yard to gain. Mahan made the distance although he gained only a yard. It was Harvard's ball on Yale's 13-yard line. Forcen went in for Harvard. On the play Mahan was stopped just short of the Yale line for the third touchdown. The play was a fake followed by a delayed pass. Mahan kicked off. Score: Harvard 24, Yale 0.

The hole which Mahan dove through was almost as wide as that through which King plunged for the touchdown at Princeton two weeks ago.

Mahan dove to Bingham on Yale's 15-yard line. Gilman and Soucy threw the Yale men back on Yale's 24-yard line.

Scovill, the hope of Yale, ran on to the field and was wildly cheered by the blue stands. Scovill was given the ball for the first rush and dashed through three yards. Wilson added two yards more through center. Taylor dove for a punt and for a punt and Mahan fumbled the ball, but the ball was brought back 15 yards for holding. Wilson tried Harvard's other right wing and made two yards. Churer took Bingham's place. Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 30-yard line. The ball was run back and out of bounds 12 yards. Harvard began rushing again. Watson gave his signals very deliberately. There was long delay by Yale, and the blue suffered a penalty of two yards.

King Makes 35-Yard Run.

On the first line-up on Harvard's 45-yard line King was given the ball and dashed through three yards for the entire Yale team and ran the distance for Harvard's touchdown. He was obliged to cross the goal line at the corner of the field. Mahan kicked out to Soucy on the 10-yard line.

Again Mahan dropped back. Mahan kicked goal, although the ball went through the upstretched arms of the Yale team. It was again Harvard's kickoff and Mahan booted the ball to Taylor, on Yale's 15-yard line. The ball was run back to the 33-yard line. Scovill carried the ball three yards, King stopping him. On the next play Scovill got outside of Soucy, but was thrown out of bounds on Yale's 30-yard line. There was holding by Yale and the ball was given to Scovill on the 24-yard line. Capt. Wilson punted to Mahan on Harvard's 35-yard line. The Crimson captain ran back to Yale's 47-yard line. On a fake kick formation Mahan lost two yards. Horween fumbled the next pass. Mahan tried Yale's left end and made five yards, being hauled down by Scovill. Mahan then punted out of bounds on Yale's 30-yard line.

FIRE "LIVENED" WITH GASOLINE

One Schoolboy Burned to Death; Three Others and Teacher Injured.

TEXARKANA, Tex., Nov. 20.—Gasoline poured from a five-gallon can "to burn in the fire" at the Red Lick district schoolhouse yesterday, caused an explosion and the serious injury of nearly every person in the room. Jules James, 19 years old, died of his injuries; Carlund Rochele, 17, and Lovett White, 16, were burned seriously, and Dudley Carpenter, the teacher, suffered minor injuries in attempting to save the flame-enclosed boys.

The majority of the school's pupils had not been assembled when the older boys mistook the gasoline for kerosene. The uninjured students put out the fire.

STUDENTS SUPPORT SELVES

More Than One-Half in Oklahoma University Are Independent.

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 20.—More than one-half of the student body at the State University is self-supporting, a fact shown by report of the registrar. Of the men, 25 per cent, and of the girls 18 per cent, support themselves entirely, while 23 per cent of the men and 21 per cent of the girls earn part of their support.

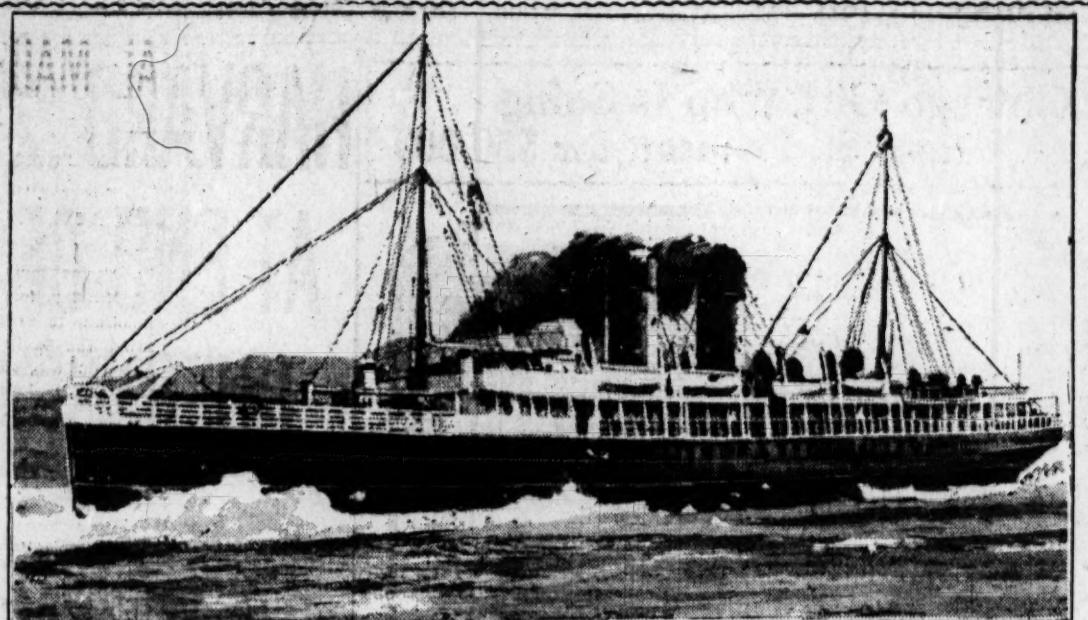

The work done by the students includes clerical, stenography, waiting on tables, janitor and porters, and of them also work in stores in the afternoons and evenings, others care for automobiles and still others do chores.

WILLOCK AID'S LIPS SEALED

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Post-Dispatch correspondent learned this afternoon at the American Embassy that before Gaston de Leval, for 10 years Counsellor to the American Legation at Brussels, left Brussels, the American Charge d'Affaires assured the German Government that during the remainder of the war de Leval, now in London, would do nothing to the detriment of the Imperial German Government. de Leval's lips, therefore, are sealed. He declines to discuss the execution of Miss Ca-wessel on which King George of England recently crossed the channel, after being injured by the fall of his horse when inspecting the army.

GIRL WHO TOOK $10,000 LIFE JOB TO GET $150,000

"Uncle Jimmy" Pankhurst, Illinois Farmer, to Leave Mary Smith Half His Estate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 20.—Miss Mary Smith has so completely won the hearts of "Uncle Jimmy" and "Aunt Louisa" Pankhurst that they have decided to will half of all they own.

Miss Smith is the girl selected for them by officers of the Federal Employment Bureau here, after the couple had offered $10,000 for a young woman who would love and care for them on their farm at Amboy, Ill., for life.

Instead of receiving $10,000, Mary will be a $150,000 heiress, and two nephews and a niece, as well as an adopted son and adopted daughter, all of whom left the elderly people to marry, will suffer.

There is little change on the front in France.

In Mesopotamia, Gen. Nixon is reported to be in sight of Bagdad.

Shah Decides to Remain in Teheran—Measures Taken to Curb Germans.

TEHERAN, Persia, Nov. 20.—A proclamation issued by the Government yesterday confirms the unofficial announcement that the Shah has decided not to leave Teheran, owing to the adjustment of questions raised between Russia and Persia. The proclamation says that in consequence of the re-establishment of cordial relations with Russia the Shah will remain in Teheran. It enjoins the Persian people to conform to the new situation and assist in reviving the ancient bonds of friendship which united the two nations.

"Uncle Jimmy," 35 years old and "Aunt Louisa" 61, Miss Smith is 21. Last week the elderly couple expressed their appreciation of their new "daughter" by buying her a thoroughbred saddle horse.

SELL COTTON GRADUALLY, BANKERS WILL TELL FARMERS

Texas Outlines Object of Conference Called in New Orleans on Dec. 6 and 7.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Nov. 20.—Back of the Cotton States Banker's conference to be held in New Orleans Dec. 6 and 7, is the idea, voiced by Joseph Hirsch, banker of this city, "sell it gradually." Reference is, of course, solely to the cotton crop. The conference was called by Hirsch, who is president of the Texas Bankers' Association, and who is also the prime mover in bringing bankers and agriculturists into closer business relations, from which such vast good has been accomplished.

Touching the New Orleans conference and its purposes, Hirsch said:

"Last year the South produced nearly 4,000,000 bales of cotton, the greatest crop in its history. Conservative business men all over the union believed that as a result of the European war and the enormous crop this was between $5,000,000 and 5,000,000 bales in excess of the world's needs. Yet, despite such anticipations, the price of cotton fell to a minimum shipping—despite the fact that the 1914 crop was the largest ever produced—we find that the world has consumed the greatest amount of cotton in history."

"With a short crop this year, variously estimated at from 10,000,000 to 12,500,000 bales, the indications point to a reduction of the visible supply to the very minimum."

"Let the farmer market his cotton gradually. Don't sell in three months what the world uses in 12. If you need money to follow this advice, the advisers—the bankers—will aid you. Don't dump the cotton on the market. Sell it as the spinners need it."

MORE THAN THIRD OF KANSAS LAW ABRIDGEMENT FOR THE YEAR

Forty Counties Out of 105 Do Not Contribute Single Prisoner to Penitentiary—272 in All.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 20.—More than one-third of Kansas was law-abiding during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915, according to the report from the office of State Auditor W. E. Davis.

Of the 105 counties in the State, 40 did not contribute one prisoner to the penitentiary. The other 65 sent 272 away, an average of more than four each.

Shawnee County easily won the blue-ribbon, with 21, a record place being held by Douglas, with a record of 12. Cherokee, Labette, Marion, and Reno were tied in the race for third rank, with 13 each, and Wyandotte is represented by seven prisoners.

age was trifling, but the inhabitants suffered severe losses in lives and property.

The enemy again violently attacked the northern sector of the Bobedo plateau. On the northern slope of Monte San Michele rapidly penetrated our positions but violent hand-to-hand fighting resulted in our troops completely maintaining their original fighting line. All attacks against the San Martino sector miscarried with severe losses for the Italians.

"On the front north of the Gorizia bridgehead two strong hostile attacks near Zazora, and several weak attacks in the Ursia region and the Flitsch district were also frustrated."

The weather seems to have intervened again in Russia. Little activity is reported except the retirement of the Russians to the east bank of the Styx, in Galicia. In Courland wet weather in the swampy district evidently has brought both sides to a standstill.

There is little change on the front in France.

He Loyal Pledged to Do Nothing Detrimental to Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Post-Dispatch correspondent learned this afternoon at the American Embassy that before Gaston de Leval, for 10 years Counsellor to the American Legation at Brussels, left Brussels, the American Charge d'Affaires assured the German Government that during the remainder of the war de Leval, now in London, would do nothing to the detriment of the Imperial German Government. de Leval's lips, therefore, are sealed. He declines to discuss the execution of Miss Ca-

PROGRESSIVES OF MISSOURI MEET AT KANSAS CITY

George W. Perkins and Judge Norton Declare for a National Ticket in 1916.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 20.—Two leaders of the Progressive party in the State and one of the nation—told a conference of county leaders that the Progressives should have a national ticket in 1916. One of the speakers, George W. Perkins, chairman of the National Executive Committee, said the only thing for the party to do was to continue its organization and have its ticket in 1916. The other, Judge Albert D. Norton of St. Louis, said he was in favor of selecting Roosevelt and Johnson as standard bearers for another national ticket.

JURY IN BABY CASE SAYS IT IS DOCTOR'S DUTY TO SAVE LIFE

Chicago Physician Cleared; Disapproval Implied of One Man Deciding Life or Death.

City Health Official Says Question Should Go to Tribunal
Like That of Sparta.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—An implied disapproval of leaving a physician to determine whether it were desirable for a patient to live or die, was contained in the verdict of the Coroner's jury, comprised of well-known physicians, which, yesterday, held that Dr. H. J.
Haiselden, who permitted the infant, Allan John Bollinger, to die when an operation might have saved him to a life of what the physician believed would have been one of unhappiness as a defective, was morally and ethically justified.

The following physicians were on the jury: John F. Golden, Mercy Hospital; Arthur Rankin, professor of anatomy,
Loyola University; D. Howard Chislett, dean of Hahnemann College; D.
A. K. Steele, dean of the Physicians and Surgeons' College of the University of Illinois; Henry F. Lewis, professor of obstetrics, Cook County Hospital; Ludwig Heitman, professor of pathology, Rush Medical College of the University of Chicago.

Consulted 15 Physicians

Dr. Haiselden testified that he did not decide to operate until after he had consulted 15 physicians, 14 of whom approved letting the little life expire. The mother of the child, wife of a workman and mother of three other children, all normal, also agreed to the baby's death, he said.

"I did not operate, first, because of the deformity of the child and second because of the seriousness of the case," he said. "I did not urge the parents to follow my advice. I simply gave them my opinion as a consulting surgeon. I was morally certain the child would be a defective."

"On what did you base your opinion?" asked Dr. Chislett.

"On the actions of the child."

"Was the brain normal?" "No, it was not."

"Was the child blind?" "Well, I could not exactly say. Its eyes would not respond to light."

"Was the child deaf?" "One of the ears was gone and I could not determine whether there was an auditory nerve."

Dr. Haiselden showed several X-ray pictures of the child's anatomy.

Spartan Tribunal Mentioned.
Dr. John Dill Robertson, City Health Commissioner, who testified that there was no evidence that the child would have been mentally defective, issued a statement in which he said:

"A question of tremendous importance is raised as to whether the right of any child to live should rest wholly on the judgment of any physician. I do not want to be understood as questioning the right of any physician to act as his conscience or judgment in any particular case would dictate, to operate or not operate in accordance therewith."

"At the same time, the life of every child should be so safeguarded by the community that it would not have to depend upon the judgment of any one or two physicians."

"If we are going to depart from the recognized duty of the physicians to save life regardless of what that life shall be afterward, then the State must provide some tribunal similar to that of ancient Sparta, which questioned the right of every child to live until it had been passed upon by this tribunal."

One Baby a Day Allowed to Die.

Dr. Haiselden interrupted the testimony of Dr. Robertson to say that from information in his hands he believed that on the average Chicago physicians secretly allowed at least one baby a day to die. The statement was not contradicted. Dr. Robertson, in reply to a question, admitted that such deaths as that of the Bollinger baby had happened many times before.

The verdict said:

"We believe that a prompt operation would have prolonged and perhaps saved the life of the child."

"We find no evidence from the physical defects that the child would have become mentally or morally defective."

"Several of the physical defects

Liberty Bell to Be on Exhibit Here for Four Hours Early Tomorrow

Historic Treasure Will Be Displayed on Special Car Near Jefferson Memorial; Children Will View It Before 9 A. M.; Parade to Start at 8.

The Liberty Bell, which rang in the old Philadelphia statehouse (now Independence Hall), to proclaim the signing of the Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, and which is the most venerated of American historic treasures, will be in St. Louis tomorrow morning. From daylight until 10:30 o'clock it will be on exhibition on De Baliviere avenue, north of the Jefferson Memorial.

The bell is on its way home to Independence Hall, from the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. It probably will not be permitted to leave Philadelphia again. It travels on its special car, accompanied by a large escort of city officials. The bell was brought to St. Louis before 8 o'clock, and will be on exhibition through petitions, circulated in the schools by the Post-Dispatch, with the co-operation of Supt. Blawett and the teachers last spring.

A special track in De Baliviere avenue, running south from the Wabash track, will be the place for displaying the bell. The bell's arrival here from Murphyboro, Ill., is set for 1 o'clock in the morning, and this will give time for switching it to De Baliviere avenue.

Cars Direct to the Bell.
The Delmar, University, Hamilton and Union car lines will run direct to De Baliviere avenue. Soon afterward the view of the Bell before 8 o'clock, which is the time set for the arrival of the parade. This parade will start from Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard shortly after 8 o'clock, and will traverse Lindel boulevard all the way.

The parade will be led by the grand might have been improved by plastic operations.

Moral and Ethical Questions.

"We believe that morally and ethically, a surgeon is fully within his rights in refusing to perform any operation which his conscience will not sanction.
We find no reason to believe that the parents of Allan J. Bollinger were deprived of the privilege of consultation."

"We recommend strongly that in all doubtful cases of this character a consultation of two or more surgeons of known reputation for skill, ethical standing and broad experience should be had to decide upon the advisability of an inadvisability of operative measures."

"We believe that the physician's highest duty is to relieve suffering and to save or prolong life."

Dr. Haiselden's Course Approved by Cardinal Gibbons.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 20.—The statement of the Roman Catholic Church toward the case of the Bollinger baby was officially set forth today in the Baltimore Catholic Review, the organ of Cardinal Gibbons. The statement, written by the editor, Mr. C. F.
Thomas, is in part as follows:

"The results of operations—serious ones—are always uncertain, no matter how confident a physician may be. For it too often happens that operations, even under favorable conditions, do not succeed and the patient dies. Operations are generally regarded as means of last resort.

"A physician may be excused if he does not try an operation even if he has what he thinks good reasons for believing that his work might be successful. He can never be absolutely certain. He is under no moral obligation to perform operations.

"The circumstances of the Chicago case are not all known. But the deformation of the child might have been such that an operation could have been considered a very extraordinary means of prolonging its life. In that supposition no one could be blamed if the child was let die according to nature, especially as, notwithstanding the published statements of physicians that the life could be saved, there is no certainty about that."

"Many physicians have said the same thing in other cases, but they failed to benefit the patient. Dr. Haiselden was not obliged to operate on the child."

cell at the Newstead avenue police station, after being arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of passing a worthless $5 check on Walter F. McCormack, a drug clerk at 3000 Lacalle avenue. The charge was that he had been drinking.

At the police station Dr. Brennan said he had been drinking heavily and could not recollect what he had

While saying he could not remember passing the check on McCormack, he said he had a hazy recollection that he obtained money on a check which he

The police are trying to trace this check.

Dr. Brennan was released this after-

SOCIETY MOVIE NO THRILLER, BUT A REEL LAUGHER

LaBeaume-Lambert Film Amuses
Large Gathering at Victoria Theater.

TAYLOR A FLIVVER-PILOT

Huntington Smith Jr., Mrs. Smith and McPheeters Of factive Comedians.

Think of sitting in a movie show, with Charlie Chaplin in front of you, and Mary Pickford across the aisle, and Theda Bara over yonder in a box, and seeing them see themselves on the screen.

It was very much like that, last night at the Victoria Theater, where society bunched society, for the amusement of society.

Whatever was on the film was the same member of the cast, smiling with satisfaction—or affecting a frown of self-criticism.

Society was there, to the capacity of the pretty playhouse. From an upper box, Winston Churchill, who put into literature the doings of St. Louis society of the '90s, and the Prince of Wales' visit, looked on the smart set of this day of motors and marble mansions.

"Twas Comedy, Anyway. "Counted In and Counted Out," the five-reel film, was described on the program as "a thrilling melodrama." It was not thrilling and was not melodrama, but it was something rarer, and more valued by film magnates and their customers—a rippling comedy. Some of the spectators laughed all the time, and all of them laughed a good share of the time.

Just how much of this amusement was due to the general acquaintance of the screen actors and actresses, it would be hard to say. But it is certain that the figure of former Judge Daniel Taylor as a wrathful father, pursuing his sleeping daughter in an 8-mile-an-hour flivver, would be good for a laugh at an art picture house. And one did not have to be acquainted with Huntington Smith Jr. to enjoy his work in the part of the rejected suitor.

Mrs. Smith, as Mrs. Moreland, the title-worshipping mother, was probably the most effective member of the cast. In the final counting-out scene, it did not take an expert in lip-reading to interpret her words when she turned on Claude Kingsbury (Smith). One could fairly hear her scream, "And as for YOU!"

Sam McPheeters' success, in a detective role, was limited only by the smallness of the part assigned him. His fat-work in the "close-up" as he took his orders from Chief Allender, and discussed police matters by telephone, was most enjoyable.

Miss Jones as Heroine.

Miss Mary Dee Jones, in the part of Marie Moreland, lived up to the program which described her as "beautiful and stylish." She successfully "regaled" the audience with scenes of disdain for the unlovable Kingsbury, despite of the bogus Count whom her parents tried to make her marry, and her rapture in the company of Jack Lennox (Roland M. Hoers).

W. D. Crowell, as the Count, was hardly villainous enough, and fitted the social setting too well to be convincing as an impostor. Judge Taylor, funny as he was in some scenes, was also not just the person to play the part of the self-made and uncouth flivver king. His best acting was done in the scenes with Marie Kiel, and the nearest approach to melodrama in the white show came with his warning, "Then, Mr. Mayor, remember the next election."

Miss Mrs. Joseph Dickson Jr., as the mother, was held into the picture by her son's good work. Some of the young women were quite sure that the girls given were being willfully riding in that dreadful conveyance, for the ride were only one of those yards.

Mrs. Herbert Cost's cabaret dance, the "crook" performance of Oliver

Anderson and Eugene Blodgett, and Jim Cole's detective efforts were enjoyable incidents. The procession of wedding guests included a number of society notables, some of whom were not so clearly recognizable as a better light might have made them.

Will LaBeaume wrote the scenario. He put into it things at which society might turn up its nose if it saw itself pictured in the ordinary moving pictures, but which it accepts with joy when they are put on to be shown in the spirit of satire. For a man to be accepted by society on concert credentials, would seem absurd if anyone could suppose that it was meant seriously. Likewise, the idea that rich parents, in this day, would think it worth while to issue invitations for a wedding to which their daughter had not consented, has a marked touch of the ridiculous. The crooks, also, were unusually accommodating to the police, leaving them little to do but to clap the handcuffs on at the right moment. J. D. Wooster Lambert, whose motion camera filmed the show, is more than a semi-professional, and his initial "L" appears in the corners of "leads," in the manner of the Napoleonic "N." Some pretty views of the children of the Protestant Orphans' Home, playing on the grounds of the home at Webster Groves, reminded the spectators of the "slow, lyric passages" which the composer really knew how and what birds were, but Goldmark was content to imitate them with chirrups from the flowers.

Well-known trait which makes one assured before strangers but shy among friends. In the picture, he plays the introduction to "Vieuxtemps' Concerto No. 5, in A Minor," the soloist, waiting for his cue, impatiently fingered the passages the violins were playing, reminding one of a high-strung horse at the start of a race.

He had played but a few notes when the interest fell in him as an attractive youth in a romantic situation began shifting to the remarkable gifts he was revealing as an artist. The Vieuxtemps Concerto is largely a show piece for the violin and it abounds in dazzling feats of technique. These Stoessel met and dispatched with the aplomb of a veteran and with a certainty and confidence which made the audience realize that the slow, lyric passages, he moved them with his rich, pure tones, full of warmth and tenderness and instinct with poetry of feeling. The concerto ended in a perfect blaze of technical fireworks and left the conviction that here was a young man clearly destined in time to take his place among the elect of violinists.

Powers at Their Best in Encore.
The audience was frankly delighted with his performance, to the extent that more than once, when the solo part rested for a time and the orchestra took up the musical interludes, Stoessel used the opportunity to applaud. There was a tremendous outburst of hand-clapping at the end, and it was so insistent that, after several returns to the stage to bow his acknowledgments, Stoessel granted an encore, Beethoven's "Romance No. 1," in which the singing tones from his bow and his power of feeling appeared at their best.

But first an incident occurred which for a moment made him again a boy rather than a skilled artist. At the end of the concerto an usher hurried to the footlights with a huge bouquet of flowers. The audience, used to seeing that form of testimonial given only to women artists, found this diverting and laughed good naturedly. Stoessel, blushing like the sun, accepted the flowers and bowed again.

Effectiveness Money-Raiser.

The society movie, as a means of raising money for charity, is likely to be more effective than the old plan of giving shows of the "College Hero" type, which eat their heads off in expenses, and which society people do not pay to attend, because they are all on the stage. With the movie, the actors furnish their own costumes and their own places of rehearsal, and buy their tickets to the show beside.

A matinee performance was given today, and the last of the best performances will be given tonight.

NEGRO RESCUED FROM FIRE BY A BROTHER OF CHIEF YOUNG

Other Occupants of House in Which Lamp Overturned Escape Without Injury.

Samuel Perry, a negro butler, was burned about the face during a fire discovered at 12:36 o'clock this morning in rooming house at 411 Washington Boulevard, conducted by Mrs. Florence Moltzoh.

The fire was caused by the overturning of a coal-oil lamp in the basement, where Perry was sleeping. When the firemen arrived in response to an alarm, Perry had been unable to escape from the basement and he was rescued by John Young, a brother of the Chief of Police.

Boomers in the house, including Miss Amelia Fruchts, teacher of English literature at Central High School, and H. Hilton, who is 77 years old and blind, got out without injury.

FOOD QUESTION TO BE UP IN REICHSTAG MEETING NOV. 30

Members Expected to Demand Prohibition of Speculation and Unreasonable Profits.

MAY TAX WAR PROFITS

Lessening of Rigors of Law Governing a State of Siege to Be Advocated.

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 20.—The Reichstag, which opens Nov. 30, probably will be concerned chiefly with the food question.

The Government has promised a statement of the measures taken and in contemplation to regulate the food supply of the empire. Most of the members are expected to go further than the Government in prohibiting speculation and unreasonable profits in foodstuffs and other articles of daily consumption.

The budget for 1916, it is understood, will not be ready for submission. Taxation of war profits undoubtedly will be advocated.

Modification is to be proposed of the law governing a state of siege, so as to permit the imposition of fines for minor offenses which now are punishable only by jail sentences. All parties are in accord on this question. The censorship will be discussed again.

The session probably will last less than a month. A definite program probably will be fixed at a conference between Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and party leaders.

Complaints of High Prices.

From every part of Germany come in increasing number complaints of ever mounting cost of living—especially of eating—and coupled with them more and more frequently the charge that the middleman is to blame, and that speculation, not shortage of food, is responsible for jacking up prices to an unprecedented height.

Scarcely a day goes by but the food question is aired in an least one of the newspapers. The most recent refers to the charge that he is at fault who is responsible for it, made with the result, as the Tageblatt said, that the more earnestly the true explanation is sought, the more muddled becomes the whole subject.

Butter has been the latest commodity to go up. It had reached the 3-marks-a-pound (75 cents) figure and was advancing daily when the authorities stepped in and anchored the price at 2 marks, 80 pfennigs, where it still remains. There is, further, a strong agitation for the Government's seizure of all butter, just as grain and other things have been seized and then dealt out equally and systematically.

Rabbits Are Scarce.

October is the rabbit season in Germany, and it has been expected this year particularly, as the people were in need of this usually inexpensive yet appetizing food. When the season opened, however, it was found that rabbits were scarce instead of plentiful, and were so had only at prohibitive prices—ranging from 5.50 to 7 marks ($1.37 to $1.75).

It was charged that the middlemen had been holding back the supply with intent to increase the prices, but that charge is met by the assertion that the number of hunters this year is smaller than ever before and the number of rabbits shot is correspondingly smaller. Hence, by the law of supply and demand, prices have gone up. It is also pointed out that ammunition, guns and equipment for the hunt are dearer than ever.

The recent experience of a Berlin banker indicates that there may be some truth in the charge against the middlemen. He purchased a puller in a Berlin game store at 3.75 marks, and his protest began with the assertion that the farmer's country price was so high that it was impossible to retail the bird for less. Yet the next day he found he was able to buy a similar fowl in a suburb for 1.30. He took both birds to the chef of a big Berlin restaurant and was assured that in weight, quality and every other particular the two were identical.

Petition by Miners.

In the mining country of Western Germany the four largest associations of miners, numbering thousands of members, have felt it necessary to petition the Imperial Government to make it impossible for the well-to-do to buy up at prohibitive prices all the available meat and fats. The petition reads:

"Such a development is bound to have the most unfavorable consequences for our people and our economics. Man needs a certain amount of fat for his nourishment. Especially for that portion of the people which does heavy physical labor is fat indispensable for replacing expended physical strength in order that, on the one hand, its health may be maintained and, on the other, that it may be kept in condition to do its work continuously. The workers are especially keyed up in a way during the war that makes physical development imperative. Especially is this the case with the miners. A minimum of them must do the utmost possible work."

"The proposed measures announced by the Imperial government for supplying cheap potatoes removes the necessity of going into that subject now. We wish nevertheless to express the urgent wish that the supplying may begin as soon as possible and at low prices."

M'KITTRICK SUED FOR $33,353

Corporation of Which He Was Official Alleges an Advance Is Unpaid. The Hargadine-M'Kittrick Dry Goods Co. yesterday filed suit against Hugh M'Kittrick of 4943 Berlin avenue, vice president of the company, for $33,353.21, alleging that the firm advanced this sum to M'Kittrick and it has not been repaid. Payment was demanded by the company Nov. 1, 1915, but was refused, it is alleged.

The Hargadine-M'Kittrick company is in liquidation. It has filed suits against various stockholders on account of stock which was not paid for.

D. A. R. DEDICATES BENTON MONUMENT IN KANSAS CITY

Memorial Made of Huge Boulder of Ozark Granite With Two Tablets.

PUBLIC EXERCISES HELD

Speeches Made on Life of Great Missourian—Gift of Benton Chapter D. A. R.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 20.—A huge boulder of Ozark granite bearing two bronze tablets, was dedicated here today to the memory of Thomas Hart Benton, teacher, lawyer, soldier, author, and statesman. The Missouri State Senator from Missouri for 30 years. The memorial is the gift of the Elizabeth Benton chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, named for the wife of the famous Missourian.

The exercises were public and were attended by representatives of the Commercial Club, the Missouri Valley Historical Society, city officials and other civic and national organizations. Six hundred invitations had been issued.

The tablets on either side of the huge stone tell the story of the greatness and foresight of the pioneer legislator, together with a brief history of his life and an allegorical forecast for the greatness of Kansas City.

Under a banner lettered "The Spirit of the South," the following:

"Thomas Hart Benton: Born near Hillsborough, N. C., March 14, 1782. Died in Washington, D. C., April 10, 1868. Called 'Apollo,' 'Wild Bullion.' First and greatest statesman west of the Mississippi. To him is due the cheap land system, specie standard, Oregon, California and transcontinental railway lines. First martyr to slavery. A national statesman who never was connected with a single act of personal dishonesty or one unworthy act of legislation."

Printed on Rock.

The other tablet shows a picture of Benton standing on what is known as "Benton's Rock" on the bank of the Missouri River near here. Dressed in the strapped trousers, high hat and frock coat of the period, with one hand stretched out over the expanse of waters, the designer has used the pose as he stood when he prophesied the transformation of the village, then known as Westport Landing to the "largest city west of St. Louis." Under the figure are the following words:

"Here where these rocky bluffs meet and turn aside the sweeping current of this mighty river; here where the Missouri, after pursuing her southern course for nearly 200 miles, turns eastward to meet the Mississippi, a great manufacturing and commercial community will congregate and less than a generation will see a great city."

The dedication of the monument also marks the twenty-first anniversary of the Elizabeth Benton Chapter, and a history of the local organization, telling of its philanthropic works was read by Mrs. H. J. S. Seelye and presented to the city by Mrs. A. W. McAlester, the recent.

The mass of granite was found in the mountains in the southern part of the State after a search of many days, and the entire undertaking represents the work of nine years on the part of the Elizabeth Benton Chapter.

The dedicatory services were presided over by Mrs. Mark S. Saalsbury, State superintendent of the D. A. R., whose efforts contributed much to the success of the enterprise. The Benton Memorial Committee, which is comprised of the following, also was active in the work: Mrs. H. J. Seelye, Mrs. Hester M. Merriweather, Mrs. Andrew W. McAlester, Mrs. Selden R. Robertson and Mrs. S. B. Davis.

The invocation was delivered by Rev. George Craft of St. George's Episcopal Church. The invocation was followed by the song "America," sung by 250 pupils from the public schools of the city.

Address on Benton.

The Rev. Charles Nesbit, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, delivered an address on "Benton."

Reminiscences were given by the Rev. Father William J. Dalton, pastor of Annunciation Roman Catholic Church and Col. John F. Richards. Father Dalton said the first holiday he could remember was in St. Louis on the occasion of Benton's funeral.

The presentation of the memorial was made by Mrs. Andrew W. McAlester, regent of Elizabeth Benton chapter. It was accepted by Mayor Henry L. Jost and Cusil Lechman, President of the Park Board, each of whom made a brief address.

The services closed by everybody joining in singing the Star Spangled Banner.

The Derelict

Born a gentleman, Jim Bennett, however, sinks to the lowest depths. He never recovers himself. His last act before final renunciation is that of the gentleman.

By H. G. Egbert.

JIM BENNETT sat on the sand of Tan-tan Island and looked out across the sea, as he had done each day for more than a year. Everybody in Tan-tan knew Jim Bennett, and the raggedest beachcomber sneered when his name was mentioned. It was not so much the depths to which he had fallen as the fact that he had fallen so far.

Three years ago he had left San Francisco to make his fortune in the South seas and come back to finance Elsie Dale. But her father was many times a millionaire, and had other ideas for Elsie's future. Everything depended, then, on Jim's making good on the trading trip, in which he had sunk his little capital.

At least, so far as marrying Elsie was concerned, her father would never consent. Jim knew Jack Dale too well to hope for that. But if the trip succeeded Jim could afford to bear the old man's enmity, and Elsie had said she would.

The ship was wrecked on an unchartered reef off Tan-tan. Jim saw his little capital lost. He had been the fare home. Despair took hold of him, then the lethargy of the life in the little place. He had sunk down and down. He had at last written to Elsie, releasing her—and had forgotten.

He had quite forgotten by the time Elsie's letter arrived. She had told him that she was going to wait three years. At the end of that time he did not claim her, she would feel free. But she loved him; let him remember that every day of his life.

At the end of the first year Jim remembered it occasionally. He was tending bar in one of the island saloons. At the end of the second year he had a hazy recollection. Then he was doing odd jobs, in his sober moments, along the wharf. At the end of the third year, while he was nothing but a beachcomber, he remembered again, this time more clearly.

He remembered it when the monthly vessel arrived. He expected that it would carry a letter for him. No letter had been at the postoffice; and yet, when Jim looked up and saw a young, athletic American, neatly dressed, with sun helmet and blue glasses, approaching him, he was sure that he had come upon business concerning Elsie.

Jim Proves His Identity.

JIM looked up lazily from among the little group of fellow loafers, and wondered how any man could find the energy to walk at that gait in such a sun. The young man drew up to the group and stopped.

"Any of you men know a fellow named Jim Bennett?" he inquired.

The man nearest Jim nudged him lazily; the rest did not even shift their eyes from the far horizon.

"I'm Jim Bennett," said Jim, rising. "See the astonishment upon the young man's face."

"Please come over here!"

He led him about 50 yards away, out of the hearing of the others. He might have saved himself the trouble, for those who were not asleep in the shade had already forgotten Jim's existence. When they stood together upon the sand the young man took Jim by the shoulders and swung him around, facing him.

"Are you Jim Bennett or are you lying?" he demanded, in crisp, nervous accents.

For an instant Jim felt the resentment that would have come to any normal man at such treatment; but then he remembered that he had left his manhood behind him at the whisky bar.

"I'm Jim Bennett," he answered doggedly. "What do you want with me?"

The other breathed hard. "Where do you come from?" he demanded. "I want proofs of what you say. Who is the woman to whom you are engaged?"

"You mean Miss Dale. I suppose," drawled Jim, and the other let his hands drop from his shoulders and stared at him helplessly.

"Are you drunk or sunstruck?" he inquired presently.

"Usually both," answered Jim truthfully. "Today, as it happens, I haven't found anyone willing to give me the price. How about you?"

Miss Dale on Board.

THE young man clapped him on the shoulder. "Listen to me," he said quietly. "You must have been a man, from all I've heard of you. I recognize you now from your photograph, although that beast makes you look quite different. Miss Dale is dead. He has left her his whole fortune. She wanted me to come and find you and bring you back to her. She loves you, and pride doesn't count. She knows what you must have been through, and she's going to ask you to marry her, once she gets you at her side. Understand?"

Jim understood. The thought of the Dale millions at his command was paralyzing; it galvanized him into life. He looked up, to see the young man reading his face.

"There's ten dollars!" he said suddenly. "No—wait! He pulled out the pocketbook again. "Here's a hundred. Do you think you can get washed and cleaned and have a new suit and good linen on your back ready to sail on the ship tomorrow?"

Jim pocketed the money mechanically. "I suppose so," he muttered. "What's your hurry?"

"Because," said the other gravely. "Miss Dale is on board. That's why. And the best man in the world couldn't deserve your luck."

Such now the new clothes, the luxury of a bath, had put new manhood is me that from this day forward you will strive with might and main to be worthy of her."

"I promise," answered Jim humbly, and the man at his side looked at him strangely. This seemed to be a new man—he had known nothing of him.

Along the deck came a white-robed figure, tripping gladly. Jim knew her at once. All his heart went out to her. Elsie had not changed a bit during those three years, except that there was more of the woman in her poise, her thoughtful eyes, and just as much of the happy girl in her smiling face.

"John!" she exclaimed. "Where—where is Jim, then? And who is this?"

Suddenly Jim realized that she had not recognized him. His tan, his beard, the ineffaceable marks of drink of those who are society's dregs.

"I'm John," he said. "I'm your friend."

He turned and walked with steady steps to the ship's gangway, and along the wharf.

Sandman story of how she is left in the grove to become finally a companion to a baby bear.

By Mrs. F. A. Walker.

AM going to take Floretta to the picture, said Grace Rider to her mother. "I expect all the other girls are going to wear their dolls."

Floretta was not nearly so pretty as the French dolls with fluffy hair and eyes that open and close, but she was good and substantial, for she had been made by Grace's grandmother, and was the first doll that Grace had when she was a little baby. Her grandmother had made it out of cloth in the house, and the hair was imitated by feather-stitch embroidery in brown cotton, and the eyes were round, black shoe buttons, and inside the cloth which made the body Floretta was filled with wool which had been sheared from one of the sheep on the farm.

When everything was ready for the picnic, and Grace's big brother Joe had called from the yard door that he was going with the horse and carriage, Grace took Floretta on her arm, and her father helped her into the carriage in the back of which had already been placed the big covered basket, which contained the contribution Grace's mother had made to the picnic feast.

THEY had all been gone for some time when Old Madam Bear came tramping through the wood, "I wish I could find something to comfort Baby Bruin," she said, having looked everywhere for some article of sprig of peppermint." Just then her eye fell upon Floretta. Now Madam Bear had taken many a trip to the edge of the wood in search of food, and from a distance had seen the children playing in the fields and she knew in a minute that Floretta was a doll, and the idea immediately popped into her head that Baby Bruin would probably be very much pleased if she could have a doll of her own, for you know baby bears are very affectionate little folks and love to have a doll to cuddle to them.

So Madam Bear took Floretta in her arm and started as fast as she could for the den, where she had left Baby Bruin, and when she got into the cave and Baby Bruin saw what her mother had brought her she acted almost like any little girl with a new doll. She liked Floretta's face and after she had admiring her as much as she wanted, she lay down on the bed of boughs and went fast asleep with Floretta clasped in her arms.

When everything was ready for the picnic, and Grace's big brother Joe had called from the yard door that he was going with the horse and carriage,

Grace took Floretta on her arm, and her father helped her into the carriage in the back of which had already been placed the big covered basket, which contained the contribution Grace's mother had made to the picnic feast.

When Grace got to the grove there were dozens of other little girls like herself all ready for the outing with their dolls. All day they played until every little girl was tired and Grace was pretty nearly ready to fall asleep. In fact, she was so tired that when brother Joe said he would look after the basket and when he picked up the basket and set it in the back of the carriage, he left Floretta sitting on the ground with her back against a tree, and no way of letting Grace know she had been forgotten, and no way of getting home by herself.

Finery That Proves Fatal

that mean more in the long run.

This is to know how to sacrifice for her gray-haired old mother whose love and belief spur her on to better effort, and a young sister whom she wants to protect, and in whom she inspires the qualities of real womanhood.

In a word, she has solved the problem of pleasure that endures. She has "slept and dreamt that life was beauty, but awoke and found that life was duty." She has found the fine foundation of getting fun out of simple things; such as enjoying frocks and turbans that are bought and paid for honestly.

Canopus the Giant Sun.

CANOPUS, the giant of the stellar system is, according to a recent calculation of W. F. A. Ellison, 49,000 times as bright as the sun. It is 134,000 times in surface and 2,420,000 times in volume. Its distance from us, according to the same estimate, is 489 light years. Suppose, says Mr. Ellison, that instead of being in the enormous distance it were placed in the center of the solar system, in lieu of the sun.

It would then occupy 456,000,000 times the space lying within the orbit of Venus, and as seen from the earth would subtend an angle of about 70 degrees of arc. Thus, when its lower limb was on our horizon, its upper limb would be within 20 degrees of the zenith. Needless to say, no life could exist on earth with such a neighbor.

She takes the trouble to find things that fit her income. When she sees a woman with wonderful Russian sables come out of a beautiful automobile she does not say, "I must have that kind of sable," but "I will be satisfied with something similar that can easily afford it." And when she puts on "something similar" she is just as attractive in the eyes of the right thinking people as the woman of costly raiment.

Why? Because there is a sparkle of hope in her eyes, buoyancy is in her step and the spirit of actual living is a part of her.

Do not mistake my meaning. She is no sacrificing saint, but she is sensible. She has heart hunger for many things, just like any other girl, but she puts it behind—behind the bigger things.

The Jarr Family

Written for the Post-Dispatch

Mr. Jarr Finds Refuge at Home
 All Other Refugees Failing Him.

WHEN Mr. Jarr returned home his wife shrieked at the sight of him. She thought it was not his corporeal presence, but an apparition, a wraith, presaging that Mr. Jarr had met with sudden destruction and his disembodied spirit had hastened to warn her that death had parted him and her from the pay roll of Jabez Smith & Co. forever.

Mr. Jarr had not been out of the house over 15 minutes. He had gone out free and independent and under no duress to return. She had seen him enter Gus' trapshop on the corner and she knew that Mr. Jarr had expected that he did not like. But here he was at home. She pinched him to see if it was indeed friend husband in the flesh, and then pinched herself to see whether she dreamed or not.

"Oh, you needn't make such a fuss about it," grumbled Mr. Jarr. "I just stepped out for a little fresh air. I was coming back. The way you act people would think I was a regular barfly and bar-rail acrobat. I did drop into Gus' just to look at the clock, but I didn't even take a glass of beer."

"And what was Gus?"

"Well, wonders will never cease," said Mrs. Jarr. "But I would like to know how they got you out of the place inside of 10 minutes without using violence."

"Aw, I wasn't going to stay," grumbled Mr. Jarr. "But by Jimminy, if a man isn't safe in a saloon from amateur photo-playwrights, why, what protection to the home is a saloon?"

Mrs. Jarr did not understand the remark. She was not paying much attention, for she heard the electric bell ring from the push button in the hall below.

"It's Maude Hoker and her husband," cried Mrs. Jarr.

Mrs. Jarr rushed forward and kissed the bride. As a good wife and mother, Mrs. Jarr tried to keep in with influential people on the social side. Mr. Claude Hoker, a pallid and vapid little type of broker's clerk, was also effusively welcome.

"Did you bring your photoplay for Mr. Jarr to look at?" Mrs. Jarr inquired of the pallid bridegroom.

Mr. Hoker looked embarrassed.

"Why, the fact is," explained young Mrs. Hoker, "Claude hasn't quite finished it yet. He hasn't decided whether he will make one reel of it or a serial."

Mr. Hoker stroked at his downy and discouraged mustache and murmured that he hadn't yet decided.

"It has the punch!" remarked the bride, for she and her husband had the jolts of the pictures perfectly. "It has the punch, but Claude doesn't want to send it anywhere. He's afraid the idea will be stolen."

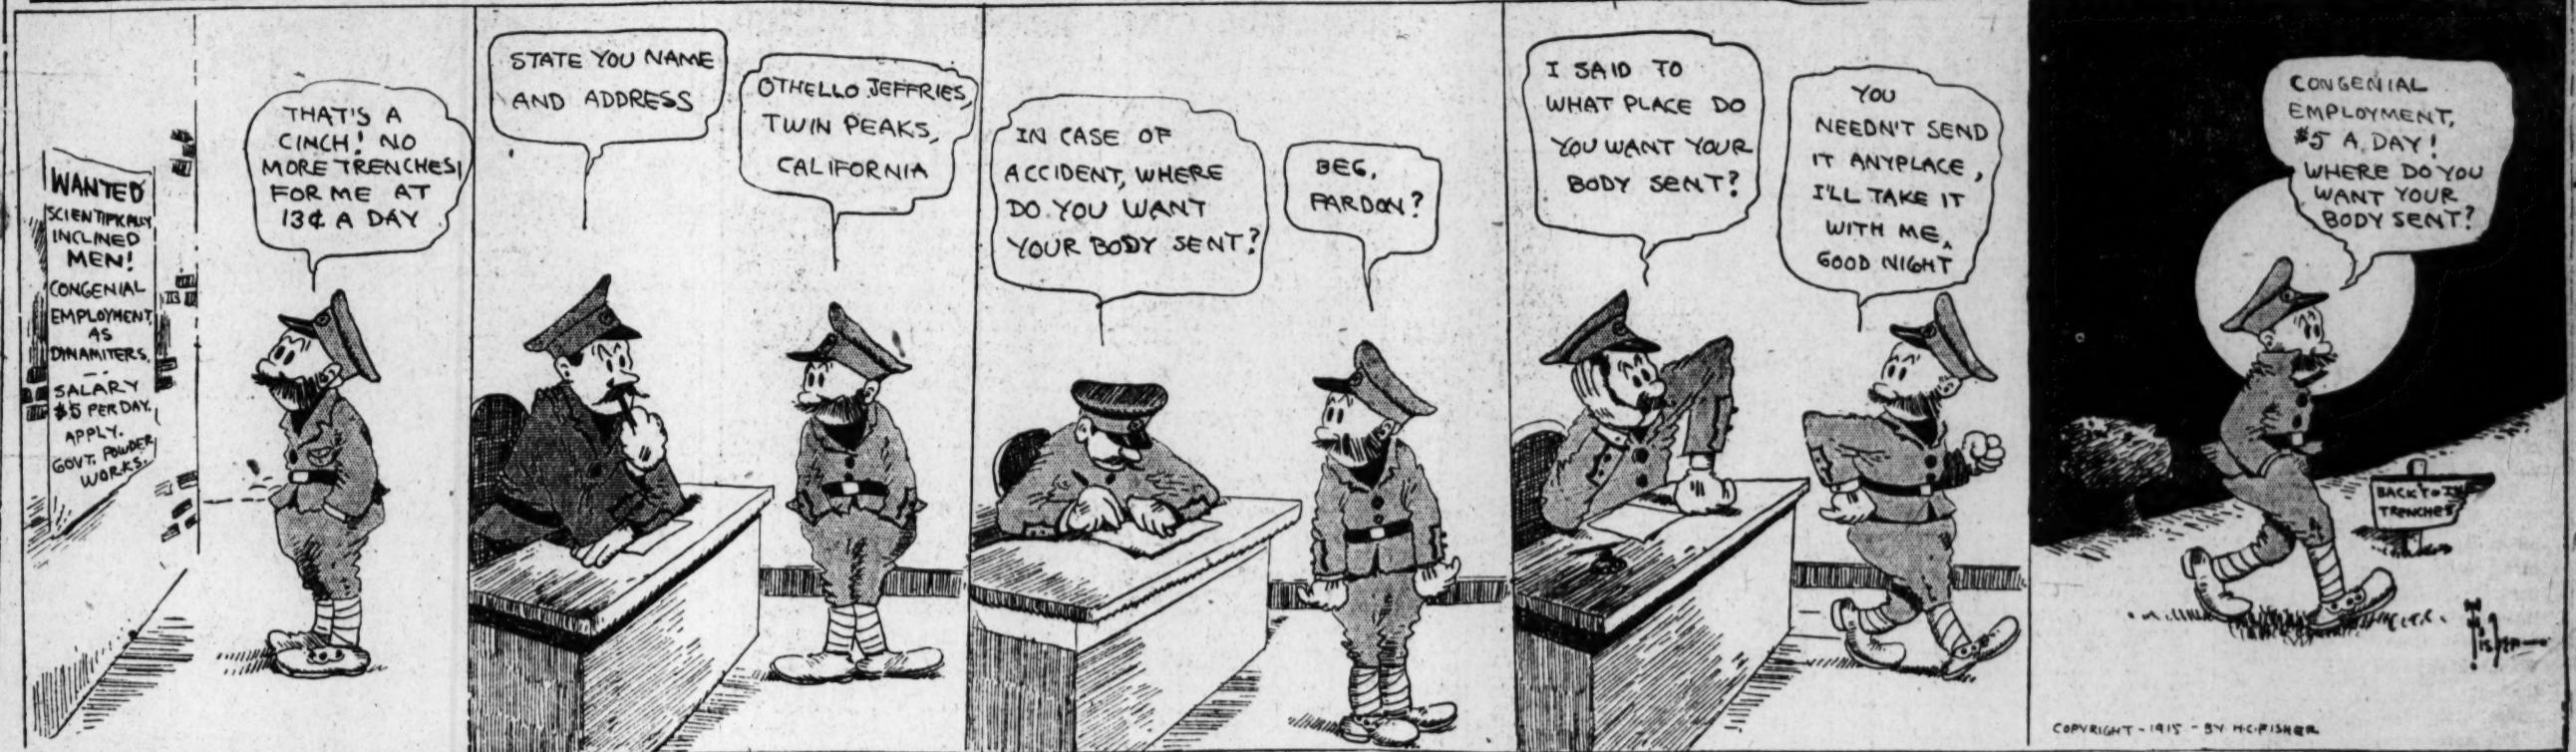

As a matter of fact it was for this reason that Mr. Jarr had been spared the affliction of having to pretend he was interested in another amateur scenario. Mr. Hoker, upon consideration, had come to the conclusion Mr. Jarr might steal his idea and sell it himself.

Down at the office Johnson, the cashier, and Jenkins, the bookkeeper, were Willie, the office boy, had a scenario that should have sold, but it was just like he had said. It was about a tomboyish daughter who saved and married the revenue officer. Besides, it was written in lead pencil on both sides of the paper. Fritz, the shipping clerk, had written his with the marking brush on sheets of manila wrapping paper, two feet by three, with the "leaders," or "readers," very neatly done and each containing the name of a city, such as:

"A WEEK LATER, JACK GOES TO SOUTH BEND, IND."

Fritz had also sent, by express, his scenario everywhere. But recently he had grown suspicious, thinking his idea had been stolen and changed slightly because he had seen on the screen a reader: "A WEEK LATER, JACK GOES TO NEW YORK."

So finding that Mr. Claude Hoker had called to see him without having a scenario concealed upon his person, Mr. Jarr could have kissed him. Instead, he kissed Mrs. Hoker, who was much better kissing.

I THERE'S nothing like a tame evening to drive some persons wild.

SHE entered the department store and complained about a lamp she had purchased, demanding that it be taken back.

"What's the matter with it, madam?"

"It has all the faults of my husband, and none of his virtues."

"Please explain yourself."

"Well, it is a good deal of brass about it; it is remarkably brilliant; requires a great deal of attention; is unsteady on its legs; flares up occasionally; is always out at bedtime, and is bound to smoke."

Poor Boob.

MY wife gave a reception yesterday." "Did you attend?"

"Yes, I played a practical joke on her. I got in line when she was receiving, and before she knew it she was smiling and saying she was glad to see me—for the first time in three years."

Exactly!

OLD SEA DOG (to gentleman viewing wreckage): Yes, sir; that's the Mary Ann' what was bound for Dundee wiv coffee."

Old Gentleman (hard of hearing): Dear me! Coffins?

Old Sea Dog: Coffins? Nah! Coffees—what you makes tea of!—Answers.

A BIG ORDER.

Not Her Quarrel.

THIS fact that corporal punishment is discouraged in some public schools in what led Harry's teacher to address this note to the lad's mother:

"I regret very much to have to inform you that your son Harry idles away his time, is disobedient, quarrelsome and disturbs the pupils who are trying to study their lessons. He needs a good whipping, and I strongly recommend that you give him one."

"Whereupon Harry's mother responded as follows:

"Dear Miss Jones—Lick him yourself. I ain't mad at him. Yours truly, Mrs. Smith."

Then It Sold.

A N art dealer had two beautiful re-productions of the painting "The Approaching Storm." One of the pictures he placed in the show window; but it didn't sell. At length, in order to draw attention to the picture he put a card on it, on which he printed the words, "The Approaching Storm," especially suitable for a wedding present."

Cleaners of Brick and Stone Buildings. Natural Color Restored.

HERE are times when a woman can say "Why, John!" so that it sounds just like a swear-word.

A Mixture of "Props."

NOW, ladies and gentlemen," said the conjurer, trying to make his husky voice impressive. "I will conclude my entertainment with truly a wonderful trick. It is a feat which must be seen to be believed."

After a lot of difficulty he borrowed a shiny silk hat from his village audience. Turning it upside down to prove it was nothing inside, he next placed it brain uppermost on his little table and proceeded to produce 10 eggs from its

The audience watched with goggling eyes, and then burst into wild applause.

"And now," the magician went on bowing his thanks, "I will show you that, although the hat is empty, there is inside it the hen that laid those eggs."

Putting his hand into the hat he withdrew a fluttering, squawking fowl, which he placed on the table and turned to face the applause.

Instead there was a wild yell of laughter. He turned in amazement which changed to horror when the fowl shrieked:

"Cock-a-doodle-do-o!"

On the Safe Side.

DO I understand you to say this actor has the habit of punching anyone who speaks slightly of his work?" asked the critic.

"That's exactly what he does," said the manager.

"Then I guess I better say he's an actor of great force."

Tactless Fellow.

A Mistake Somewhere.

YEAH," said Uncle Silas, "my son Bill he's got back from a special course he's been a-takin' at college with a piece of paper signed by the 'theorist,' saying as much as this: 'Mr. John, what are A. M. is, but I'm afraid there's some mistake about it, for judging from the time he sits down to breakfast, he behaves more like a P. M. ter me."

Not Afraid of Fire.

LAWYER: You say you told the cook to get out of the house the minute you found it was on fire and she refused.

Mrs. Burns: Yes; she said she must have a month's notice before she'd leave.—National Food Magazine.

Some men wouldn't know housecleaning was going on if it were not for the fact that less attention is paid to their meals.—Albany Journal.

The Height of It.

THEY tell me," said the professor, "that Mrs. Highroller is a very sympathetic woman."

"I should say she was," said Harkaway. "Why, when her husband eloped with Mrs. Gayboy, she immediately sent Mrs. Gayboy a telegram of condolence."—New York Times.
